

Dear Mr. Grosovsky

My name is Michael Savarese

I am a student at Boston College, where I am taking a Collaborative Computing course taught by one of the faculty members responsible for organizing Boston's inaugural Blockchain in Education Summit this fall.

The opening keynote is an MIT professor who co-founded the MIT Media Lab, and there are also a number of related hand-on workshops that I thought you or some of your department members might be interested in.

If you'd like a preview of the conference you can visit the website (which officially opens this Wednesday) at:

<http://summit.ImmersiveEducation.org/Boston>

The conference is an official Immersive Education Summit, which are conferences organized for educators, researchers, administrators, business leaders and the general public. Summit speakers have included faculty, researchers, graduate students, administrators and executives from the world's leading academic and cultural organizations, universities, and companies, such as the United Nations, NASA, United States Department of Education, Harvard University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), MIT Media Lab, Smithsonian Institution, Walt Disney Animation Studios, Google, Microsoft, Intel, United States Department of the Interior (DOI) National Park Service, Stanford University, USC, UCLA, and other world-class organizations and academic institutions (please see <http://summit.ImmersiveEducation.org> for more details).

I hope that my contacting you with information about the upcoming Blockchain in Education Summit is of interest to you, and I've included the Immersive Education support team in my email since they can provide you with more information as well.

If you have any questions in the meantime I would be happy to help answer them, of course.

With personal regards,

Michael Savarese
